Welcome to Clayton College and State University

On behalf of the Clayton State community and the Department of Music, I am pleased to welcome you to our campus. CCSU serves over 4,000 students in a broad array of two- and four-year programs, including the Bachelor of Music in Performance, the Bachelor of Music in Composition, and the Bachelor of Arts in Integrative Studies, enabling the student to combine work in music and business. Students interested in music education may pursue the A.A. at Clayton State, which is then fully-transferable to other units in the State University System of Georgia.

I know that I speak for all students and faculty in the Department of Music when I say that we are extremely pleased to be hosting the 1997 Georgia Music Teachers Association State Convention. I hope that you will find your stay here comfortable, stimulating, and professionally rewarding. Please let me, and my colleagues, know if in any way we can assist you during your stay on our campus.

Sincerely,

Dr. John Schuster-Craig

At the University of Georgia, high admission standards also apply to the pianos.

When the University of Georgia's School of Music in Athens recently invested in 46 new Steinway pianos, they made a clear commitment to the continuing excellence of their music program. Because, while other pianos may be less expensive, they are also lesser pianos. Only the handmade artistry of a Steinway offers a touch and tone that lets students explore the full range of their expression.

So, if your piano students are trying to decide which college to attend, remind them to consider the school's reputation and faculty, and to count the Steinways.

Rhythm Problems - Panel Discussion
Moderator - David George

Panel: Nancy Dyes, Natalie Codelli, Michiko Otaki, and David Watkins

Rhythmic problems have often been problematic for piano teachers as well as their students.
Many teachers have developed innovative and creative approaches to teaching rhythmic problems. This panel, consisting of two private and two college piano teachers, will discuss some of their own approaches in dealing with rhythmic problems.
